Senbon Street in front of hotel was the chuo-street of the capital during the Heuan period. Currently it is narrow at about 10m, but at the time it was about 85m in size! This road is the border between "Kyoto on the right and Kyoto on the left" in KYOTO. The standard for right and left is not based on the north-facing map but right and left as seen from Emperor in palace building [facing south] so the left on the map is Ukyo, it is just opposite.

The station building was once used by the emperor and other members of emperor family, so it was a magnificent station building with a guest room, due to the elevated railway the station building was moved to the KYOTO RAILWAY MUSEUM.
